The Church now called St. Matthews, Seat Pleasant, for some two centuries has been popularly known as Addison Chapel, from the name of its founder, Rev. Walter Dulaney Addison, Rector of Broad Creek Parish. When we erected it into a parish church some years back (1919), we named the parish Addison Parish to commemorate this historic fact.

This parish now popularly called Broad Creek Parish (and this for a good many years was its legal name) is now, as formerly, called legally King George's Parish. At one time it was known as Piscataway Parish.

Addison Chapel was originally in King George's Parish; later the same parish with Pinckney Memorial Church at Hyattsville, and indeed its Church name, St. Matthews, gave its name to that parish which the Hyattsville parish still retains though St. Matthew's Chapel is no longer in it.

More recently, Addison Chapel was in Epiphany Parish, Forestville. I know no more complicated history than this in either Maryland or Virginia.

PISCATAWAY, PRINC' GEO. CO., MD., Sept. 2, 1775

MY DEAR COUSIN SALLIE:—In my last I promised you I would write again at my earliest opportunity, for I knew very well how anxious you would be to get tidings from your friends in this distant part of the world just at this critical time. The ship, Margaret, now taking on cargo at this port will sail for Glasgow sometime this week, and Capt. Spier, our mutual friend commanding, has kindly offered to carry to you my letter and a package containing some mementos, among them, pieces of embroidery, the work of my own hands, also a book of pressed wild flowers which I gathered in the summer. Accept them, please, as slight tokens of my remembrance and abiding affection. You see that, though long distance separates us you have not been forgotten.

I wrote you in my last, by the Pallas, that we were having troublous times. Every day since then, I believe, they have been growing still more so.

As there are great differences of opinions among our people about resistance to the late acts of Parliament there are naturally many angry contentions, and families are divided and estranged. Wild rumors are continually coming to alarm and terrify. The noise of drum and fife is heard everywhere and troopers are mustering and drilling in every neighborhood. I do not know what the end of it all will be, but older and wiser heads than mine for-see a long and bloody conflict between the colonies and the mother country. Many of our friends are already on their way to Boston where blood has been shed. Uncle Rob, went as a captain and cousin Jim as lieutenant. Uncle Rob, you know was always fond of adventure. He was a soldier in the Bradock war and fought the French and Indians under Col. Washington who is now general commander in chief of the Provincial armies. The general was always one of his heroes and he is ready to follow his lead again.

If you could come back here you would find everything so changed from the time you left us three years ago. The neighborhoods are quite deserted, so many young men have left at the call for troops, and some have been going back to the mother country by every ship and more are preparing to go before the tenth of September when the nonimportation act goes into effect.

But I must not fill my letter with accounts of all these things. So I will tell you something about your friends in Broad Creek and other neighborhoods as well as in this, where you visited. Your Aunt Barbavra Lyell long a sufferer was laid to rest a fortnight ago.

I saw your friends Ruth Addison and Mary Emmet at church last Sabbath. I heard from your acquaintances the Hutchinsons and Hattons a few days ago. They were all well. Betty Lowe and Susie Lloyd go out on the Margaret.

Our congregation at the Broad Creek church is now very small oftentimes no minister is at the service, only lay readers. There have been several weddings of late notwithstanding the great commotion. But parties and balls have had their day and pass for a long time to come.

I assure you I would rather be in the quiet and peace of dear old Glasgow just now, but my line of duty is here, and I must remain and pray for better days.

I cannot say now when I shall write again, they say no ships will be sailing, but when I can I will send you tidings. Excuse my rambling epistle, and believe me as ever, your loving cousin,

SUSIE NOBLE.

EARLY MARYLAND HISTORY.

OLD PISCATAWAY OF TO-DAY—AN OLD BILL OF LADING—A LETTER OF OTHER DAYS.

CHAPTER VIII.

The stranger who approaches the ancient hamlet of Piscataway by the lonely Maryland roads, or makes his tedious way to it by the shallow stream once so broad and deep, and surveys the forlorn aspect of untrait and desolation which has settled like a pall over dilapidated tenement, deserted ways and sunken piers, finds it difficult to realize that there was once a time when it was a prosperous port for foreign commerce with many square rigged vessels coming and going with valuable cargoes, when in the counting houses clerks were busy taking account of large trade and traffic in pounds, shillings and pence and making out bills of exchange and bills of lading for merchants in London, Glasgow, Greenock and even Amsterdam. But so it was, as the old ledgers and invoice and letter books of the merchants attest. And here before me is one of the many bills of lading which went out with the cargoes over the stormy seas:

"Shipped October 20, 1760, by the grace of God, in good order and well conditioned to the order of james Brown & Co., merchants in Glasgow, Scotland, two hundred hogsheads of Orinoco tobacco, one hundred hides, three nundred pounds of tallow, five bales of pelts, and sundry other articles of merchandize, by Alexander Hamilton, agent, in and upon the good, fast sailing ship, Clyde, whereof is master under God for this present voyage Captain james Smith, and now riding in Piscataway river, Prince George county, Province of Maryland, and by God's grace bound for the port of Glasgow, in Scotland, and so God send the good shfp and cargo in safety to her destined haven. AMEN."

This waif saved as a brand from the burning, faded and crumbling to the touch, is a ready talisman to summon up for the historic student who delights in old time lore the mystical events and circumstances of the long forgotten past It is the magic link which reaches backward and unites the chain of the then and the now. It opens a vista through a hundred and forty years. It takes us almost back to the French and Indian war.

Bradock had been lying in his grave in the wilderness but five years: Alexandria was a prospering town of six or seven hundred inhabitants; Georgetown was a straggling hamlet and the surveyor was running his lines through the forests where now rise the spires and domes of our National Capital.

Lord Fairfax was living his recluse life in the solitudes of the Shenandoah valley, with only hunters, half breeds and packs of hounds for his companions.—George William Fairfax was living in the stately mansion of Belvoir, on the Potomac, and Col. George Washington, in the flush of his first military honors, had just brought widow Martha Curtis to be the mistress of his home of Mout Vernon.

From a bundle of letters some of which are but shreds of their former selves, we take with careful and reverent hand one whose faded lines opens for us some glimpses of retrospection athwart the span of the faded years.

EARLY MARYLAND HISTORY.

THE MINUTE MEN—ARNOLD'S EXPEDITION TO QUEBEC—MANY OF THE MARYLAND FAMILIES LEAVING—DECLINE IN PISCATAWAY.

CHAPTER VII.

The letters of the old manuscript book of the Piscataway agent which follow consecutively from the close of our last chapter to March, 1776, are interspered with many more allusions to events and circumstances then transpiring, which have become important matters of history.

Under date of August 20th, 1775, Mr. Hamilton writes: "You will see by the newspapers that go home by this ship—the Jean—that an association has been formed which all able bodied persons in the colony between the ages of 16 and fifty, are expected to join and appear at musters and drills whenever required by the military authorities; and one-fourth of their number are to hold themselves in readiness to march for the public service at any time and to any part of the continent. All who refuse to join this association are to be reported to the "committee of safety," and dealt with accordingly. These troops are known by the name of minute men, and are to be paid when on actual duty only. I have ever since the first congress openly declared that I would not fight against my soverign and the land that gave me birth, and lately when there was a false alarm spread through the country that some Brittish troops had landed on the Patuxent, I was called upon to fight and I refused."

September 2d, 1775: "I have resolved to stay here as long as I can. The Rev. Jr. H. A. of Broad Creek church, will [illegible]. He can not approve the course of the present leaders, by whom he is looked upon as a friend to the British Government."

February 9th, 1775: A detachment of the Grand Continental army, under the command of Brigadier General Montgomery, had sometime ago invested Quebec, and on the 31st of December, 1775, attempted to storm it, but were repulsed with loss. The General, his aide, several officers, and a number of privates were killed, and many officers and privates were made prisoners." This was the disastrous termination of the fool-hardy expedition of General Benedict Arnold.

Arnold at that time was only a reckless adventurer, horse trader and jockey, making a livelihood by cunning and trickery, two attributes which served him instead of integrity and honesty of purpose his life long, and which brought him to grief in the end. But he had managed to win the confidence of Washington, and by his plausible and persistent representations, had induced him to believe that with a small force of armed men, he could in twenty days march through the wilds of Maine, surprise the garrison of Quebec and take possession of the city, at that time the best fortified place in the world Accordingly, ten companies of infantry and three of riflemen were assigned to him for the undertaking. The distance was six hundred miles, through silent, pathless solitudes, and was not accomplished until the end of six weeks. Morgan commanded the riflemen and led the expedition.

How they made their way through almost impassable jungles and thickets. the wayside brambles tearing their scanty uniforms to tatters. How they waded rivers and mired through swamps and morasses. How they dragged their boats and baggage over the long portages from stream to stream. How they suffered from hunger and the intense cold of the Autumn and Winter nights of that higher latitude and how at last, after having at the dead of night made the crossing of the rapid two mile current of the St. Lawrence they fearless assaulted with a force of barely six hundred shivering, half famished men a city with two thousand cannon on its ramparts and a garrison of more than a thousand well conditioned defenders in its barracks, is a story of perils, bravery and exciting incidents the most marvelous in the history of the Continental struggle.

But Daniel Morgan, the "wagon boy of the Occoquan," was the intrepid leader, the animating spirit. In the darkness of the winter night, through a blinding snow storm, he led his handful of valliants along the narrow, tortuous streets lighted only by the blazing of musketry and artillery and never faltered in the heroic advance until overpowered by many times their number. Arnold fell wounded in the onset and had but little part in the assault, but he wrongly received the credit until after many long years the facts of historic research awarded it to the true hero

In the autumn of 1775 very many of the families in Prince George and Charles who had no affiliation with the declared objects of the Provincials made haste to arrange their business affairs, to leave their different neighborhoods for refuge in England or Scotland. Every out going ship took its quota of this element of Maryland society. The Piscataway agent of Brown & Co., Glasgow, hurried on board of the merchandise of his three stores at Piscataway, Bladensburg, and Lower Marlboro and fled to the back woods of Virginia, where he remained during the eight years of the war. When he returned in 1783 he found much of their property destroyed and the many debts which he had left uncollected, outlawed or repudiated.

From this time the prosperity of Piscataway town began to decline. New conditions in trade and traffic were taking place. The channel of the once deep river was fast filling up with the washings from the adjacent cultivated fields by the summer and winter floods, and Alexandria more eligibly situated on the main stream was becoming the chief shipping point for all the regoin surrounding it.

AY 24, 1899.

Getting his clothes bag from the [illegible] room, as the other men were [illegible] Welch dressed in a clean working su[illegible] with his big black kerchief correct[illegible] knotted about his throat, and hurri[illegible] down to report to Mr. Karl.

In the steerage the naval cadets a[illegible] junior officers were just finishing [illegible] early breakfast, and the Japanese se[illegible] ants were hurrying back and for[illegible] with tempting dishes and steami[illegible] pots of coffee. The cockswain's kno[illegible] at the door brought the steera[illegible] steward, and to him Welch repeat[illegible] his message. His words were heard [illegible] the youngsters at the table, and one [illegible] them sang out in clear, boyish tones:

"Come in, Welch."

The cockswain, hat in hand, enter[illegible] the room and found himself faci[illegible] Naval Cadet Karl, who was maki[illegible] short work of a regulation navy bre[illegible] fast of bacon and eggs.

"I was ordered to report to you, sir[illegible] said Welch.

"All right, cockswain; come in he[illegible] I want to see you a minute," and Ka[illegible] jumping up from the table, pushed op[illegible] the door of his stateroom and motion[illegible] to Welch to enter the little room wh[illegible] the tumbled bunks and general unti[illegible] appearance showed that Karl's Japan[illegible] boy had not yet put this apartment [illegible] condition for inspection.

Such an unusual proceeding on t[illegible] part of their messmate as to invit[illegible] sailor into his stateroom made the e[illegible] of the other young gentlemen at t[illegible] table protrude from their sockets.

"Karl always was a genius in ecc[illegible] tricity, but this move beats me," marked one of the cadets.

There was but one chair in the sta[illegible] room, and in this Karl seated the [illegible] man as soon as the heavy drapery [illegible] the door had fallen behind them.

"See here, Andrew"—Karl was vi[illegible] hly excited, and his voice trembled [illegible] little as he spoke—"you're going w[illegible] me today into a veritable hell trap, a[illegible] before we go I want to tell you som[illegible] thing. Until after you had told [illegible] commandant of cadets at the acade[illegible] that you were guilty of 'gouging' [illegible] that 'skinny' exam. I never knew t[illegible] you cared anything for my sister. [illegible] acted like a coward about that affa[illegible] and I am willing to acknowledge it. [illegible] permitted you to take the whole bla[illegible] because I was too [illegible]ardly to let [illegible] that I was the guilty person. I as[illegible] you to help me at that examinati[illegible] and you did it. When old Crock a[illegible] on the door that piece of paper w[illegible] the skinny problem on it, which y[illegible] had tried to pass to me, I should ha[illegible] owned up at once that the problem w[illegible] intended for me and not for you. W[illegible] I didn't own up to it, as I should ha[illegible] done." Karl's face was now flush[illegible] and he was raising his voice a lit[illegible] "You were dismissed and never lis[illegible] a word to anybody in the acade[illegible] about my treachery.

"You took my punishment. You w[illegible] disgraced and your life was ruin[illegible] You could have ruined me had y[illegible] been less of a man. No, no"—Wel[illegible] had now jumped to his feet and w[illegible] trying to say something—"I say y[illegible] could have ruined me, but you took [illegible] disgrace and for my sake became [illegible] homeless wanderer. After you were d[illegible] missed from the academy I learn[illegible] that Nellie loved you. Yes; she wr[illegible] me that she loved you, and, see, here[illegible] the letter."

Karl drew from a pigeonhole in [illegible] desk a dainty envelope and passed it[illegible] Welch, who sat with his hand shadi[illegible] his eyes, as if dazed.

"Then I began to see how selfishly [illegible] had behaved," Karl went on. "Wh[illegible] you came on board this ship, an enli[illegible] ed man, I knew you at once in spite [illegible] your mustache and your changed [illegible] pearance, but Bill and the other fello[illegible] didn't recognize you. I have done wh[illegible] I could for you here, but it hasn't be[illegible] much that I could do. I knew y[illegible] would want to go on this cable cutti[illegible] trip, and I asked the first luff to se[illegible] you with me in the cutter.

"I have kept my secret, but in t[illegible] letter, which I have just written, [illegible] have told the fellows all about you a[illegible] how you took my punishment like [illegible] hero—yes, that's the word, a hero, [illegible] you are a hero, Andrew, and I'm a co[illegible] founded rascal. If I don't get ba[illegible] from this trip we are going on tod[illegible] the boys will find this letter in [illegible] desk. I have written home, too," a[illegible] Karl's face became pale again, and [illegible] nervously shuffled the papers in [illegible] desk. "Nellie will know about it t[illegible] I have told her all in this letter."

The naval cadet and the seam[illegible] faced each other in silence a mome[illegible] then they separated, each to prep[illegible] for the hazardous venture in whi[illegible] they were to participate.

When Welch walked out through t[illegible] steerage country to the forecast[illegible] tightly clasping in his hand the dain[illegible] envelope Karl had given him, his fa[illegible] was paler than usual.

At 11 o'clock the battleship and t[illegible] rest of the squadron moved in towa[illegible] the harbor and opened fire on the Spa[illegible] ish batteries, several miles distan[illegible] While the big guns roared and t[illegible] shells were flying toward the hea[illegible] sending the Spanish gunners scurryi[illegible] like frightened rats into their holes, t[illegible] steam launch with the cutter in t[illegible] shoved off from the battleship.

The location of the cable was know[illegible] and when the cutter was a mile fr[illegible] shore the grappling irons were throw[illegible] overboard, and the work was begun [illegible] earnest. The cutter, cast adrift fro[illegible] the launch, worked in toward the sho[illegible] while the launch moved out into t[illegible] harbor and was out of range when t[illegible] Spaniards opened fire.

Oct.br 1.st The Vestry should have been held in course but none being present but the Rev.d Mr. Henry Addison & Mr. Tho.s Dawson

Nov.r 5.th 1751 Tuesday the Vestry met in course present Mr. Tho.s Dawson Mr. David Ross Vestry men & Jn.o Rose Churchwarden and they waited till Twelve a clock to See if the rest of the Vestry would come but none appearing they began to Enquire what Sums would be necessary to be Levyed for the use of the parish for the Ensuing year that Application might accordingly be made to the next County Court for that purpose but as there appeared no regular Acc.t Books in the books of the Application of the last years Levy and they were informed that the Sum Levyed on that part of the parish which lies in Charles County in the year 1749 was Still in Mr. Sam.l Hansons hands the then Sheriff of that County and no acc.t yet transmitted, and also the Sum Levyed on that part of the parish which lies in Charles County in the year 1750 is Still in the hands of the Sheriff Mr. Jn.o Hanson and no acc.t of the same yet transmitted and as there appears also a ballance due from Mr. Cook Esq.r yet unapplied and there also appears to be 12:6: from a Certain Thomas ever Since the year the ninth of Feb.y 1743/4 which he agreed to pay Interest for as appears by an Entry of the Register Books Jan.y 16.th 1744/5

The Vestry taking these things into Consideration thought proper to delay applying to the County Court for any further Tax on the Parishioners until these Acc.ts should be adjusted and until a fuller meeting of the Vestry which they appointed to be held on Thursday the 21 of this Inst.t and Ordered that the Register should give all the Vestry men and the Churchwarden now absent Notice thereof

Sign.d Tho.s Dawson Agreed to get Mr. Jn.o Cook's Acc.t with the parish ready to lay before the Vestry at the next meeting

And the Vestry Ordered that the Register should go to Charles County and get from Mr. Sam.l Hanson

Sr. The Vestry have Lookt at your Account and have Desired me to inform you that they do not Approove of it, as you have Extended the Tobacco at Ten Shillings p C. whereas they Apprehend the Parish Levy Ought to be Accounted for as Rec. in Money at 12/6 from those who make no Tobacco, or in Tobacco from those who make it, they Also object to the Clerks Fees 2/3 as you have not Sent the particulars nor do they know of any Service he has done the Parish whereon any Fees could Arise, they also are of Opinion that you have only aright to 5 p C. Commis. on the Tobacco and you charge 6 p C. without giving them any Credit for Tobacco so they desire you will Amend your Acct. and transmit it as Soon as possible they also object to your charging 10 p C. for Conveniency as the Law gives no Such deduction in the Parish Levy, Sam. Sr. The Vestry have Examined your acct. and are of Opinion there must be some mistake in it as you give them Cr. for only ⅓ of the Levy rec. in Tobacco whereas they apprehend they ought to have Credit in Tobacco from all who make Tobacco and the proportion of Tobacco makers in that part of the parish must they imagine be much greater then you give Cr. for So they desire you will amend the acct. and Send it to them as Soon as possible they also Object to your Charge of Clerks fees 3 Tobacco as they have not had the particulars but Apprehend that for any thing he could do towards their Petition for the Levy or laying it he can make no charge as it is not mentioned in the List of Clerks fees in the Inspection Laws and by that Law he is allowed 2000 for all the Service he can do the County they also Object to the 10 p C. you charge for Conveniency as the Law gives no Such deduction in the parish Levy — Sam.
